

Social: The program focus on supporting pwds to fully realize their rights to actively participate in family and community life as equal an valued members of society. People are social being. Being included in family and community life is very important for a person’s development and happiness. In addition, the opportunity to have relationship, to be a parent, to go to the pagoda, or to speak with friends are most important to pwds. Therefore, the program concerned with making family and community life more accessible to children and adult with disabilities by changing negative attitudes and promoting their inclusion in social religious activities. In Cambodia has limited public social services. The family is the main and only means of support for pwds. Family members often work as personal assistants and some of family members may not always be supportive and can abusive and exploit a pwd.

